Special Events

St. Patrick's Day Parade.

THE CHARLOTTE REGION CELEBRATES with festivals, sports events and activities of all kinds to suit any interest. Here's a brief look at some perennial favorites; keep an eye on local newspapers, radio and TV for others.

Arts festivals are among Charlotte's most popular events. Festival in the Park (www.festivalinthepark.org), an arts and crafts festival around Freedom Park's lake, appears every September.

Several festivals celebrate Charlotte's international and ethnic ties, including the St. Patrick's Day Parade and Irish Festival (www.charlottestpatsday.com) in March, the Loch Norman Highland Games (www.ruralhillfarm.org) near Davidson in April, the Yiasou Greek Festival (www.yiasoufestival.org) in September and UNC Charlotte's International Festival (<http://ifest.uncc.edu>) in September. Novello (www.novelofestival.net), a festival sponsored by the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Library, draws thousands in October to hear authors such as John Hart, Sarah Paretsky and Scott Turow.

Rock Hill invites visitors to its 10-day Come-See-Me festival (www.comeseeme.rockhill.net) in April.

Sports events always draw big crowds in and around Charlotte. Here are some of the biggest: the Queens Cup Steeplechase (www.queenscup.org) at Mineral Springs in Union County in April, the Wachovia Championship PGA tournament (www.wachovia-championship.com) in May at Quail Hollow Country Club and the Charlotte Ultraswim (www.justswim-mac.org) in June.

NASCAR races roar twice a year at Lowe's Motor Speedway (www.lowesmotorspeedway.com), including race week with the Nextel All-Star Challenge and Coca-Cola 600 in May and the Bank of America 500 in October. Racing excitement spills from the speedway into Uptown during Speed Week each May. You can enjoy a parade, fireworks, free concerts, food and special events leading up to the Coca-Cola 600.

Holidays are prime times for fun. Fireworks and a concert spark the city's Fourth of July festivities. On Thanksgiving, the Carolinas Carrousel Parade (www.carrouselparade.org) salutes princesses chosen from area high schools and opens the Christmas season with Santa's arrival.

Folks who love collecting ideas for their homes will enjoy the many home tours. The Mint Museum (www.mintmuseum.org) sponsors two of the best – the Home and Garden Tour in April and the Antiques Show in October. The Charlotte Symphony Guild (www.symphonysguildcharlotte.org) sponsors the ASID Designer House each September. The Home Builders Association of Charlotte (www.hbacharlotte.com) presents HomeArama each spring. Many neighborhood groups and private companies also sponsor home tours throughout the year, where you can look at renovated older homes or spectacular new ones.

Many organizations sponsor exhibits and trade shows at the Charlotte Merchandise Mart, the Charlotte Convention Center and other sites around town. Southern Shows Inc. (www.southernshows.com) sponsors several Charlotte favorites, including the Southern Spring Show in February-March, the Southern Ideal Home Show in September-October and the Southern Christmas Show in November. 📍

PROFESSIONAL AND AMATEUR SPORTS enthusiasts have a lot to cheer about in the Charlotte region. While many area newcomers carry other team allegiances, it doesn't take long for Charlotte's home teams to earn a place in their hearts as well.

NASCAR is the region's oldest professional sport, as the city embraced stock car racing long before it became a national passion. More NASCAR teams are based in the Charlotte area than in any other city. Lowe's Motor Speedway, the largest sports facility in the Southeast, hosts three major races – the Bank of America 500 in October and the Sprint All-Star Race and Coca-Cola 600 in May – as well as numerous other events throughout the year. The zMax Dragway at Concord is the only all-concrete, four-lane drag strip in the country, with its first race held on Sept. 11, 2008.

While Charlotte has been home to NASCAR for decades, fans can now cheer local teams of the NBA and NFL.

Particularly since their 2004 Super Bowl debut, the NFL Carolina Panthers draw fans to Bank of America Stadium to see stars like quarterback Jake Delhomme and wide receiver Steve Smith. In 2007-2008, the Panthers were 8-8, just missing the playoffs. Charlotteans have high hopes for the 2008-2009 season, with Delhomme teaming up once again with Smith and the return of Muhsin Muhammad.

Under the ownership of former Black Entertainment Television founder Robert Johnson, the NBA Charlotte Bobcats played their first season in 2004 at the Charlotte Coliseum and moved to the new Uptown Time Warner Cable Arena in 2005. The Bobcats continue to entertain crowds with stars like Raymond Felton and Sean May – both from the 2005 NCAA Championship Tar Heels team – 2004 No.2 draft pick Emeka Okafor, and recently signed Jason Richardson.

If hockey's your game, check out the Charlotte Checkers. The Checkers play in the East Coast Hockey League and are affiliated with the NHL's New York Rangers. In 1996, the Checkers won the ECHL Championship and fans' excitement about the team has remained high ever since. The team also plays in the Time Warner Cable Arena.

If golf is more your speed, don't miss the Wachovia Championship in May. Hosted by Quail Hollow Country Club, the tournament had a successful sixth year. In 2008, Anthony Kim finished 16 under par to win five strokes ahead of second-place Ben Curtis. The tournament's purse is one of the largest on tour, which brings many of the greats to Charlotte.

While Charlotte is not a Major League Baseball town, the Charlotte Knights, 1999 International League Champions, are a favorite of all who enjoy the national pastime. As the Chicago White Sox's AAA affiliate, the Knights afford local residents the opportunity to see the sport's rising stars. The team plays at Knights Castle in Fort Mill, just across the S.C. state line off I-77, with plans to relocate to an Uptown stadium.

The region is also home to two single-A baseball clubs – the Hickory Crawdads, affiliated with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and the Kannapolis Intimidators, farm club for the Chicago White Sox. Both teams play in the South Atlantic League.

Additionally, the Charlotte Eagles, who play in the Second Division of the United Soccer Leagues, and the Lady Eagles, who play in the W-League of the United Soccer Leagues, will delight soccer fans. The Eagles have advanced to the championship match for the past three seasons. The Lady Eagles stunned the league when they were national champs in their second season, 2001.

Catching a Charlotte 49ers men's basketball game is a must. Led by head coach Bobby Lutz, the 49ers joined the Atlantic 10 Conference in 2005 and consistently make postseason play.

U.S. National Whitewater Center.

Located on Lake Norman, the Davidson Wildcats men's basketball team has revived small-town Davidson and received national attention for the entire Charlotte area. Under the leadership of 20-year head coach Bob McKillop, the Wildcats hope to repeat and further their Elite Eight run with junior All-American Stephen Curry, son of former Charlotte Hornet Dale Curry.

Outdoor sports enthusiasts are excited about the new U.S. National Whitewater Center, a world-class park with controllable rapids that is modeled after the 2000 Olympic site in Australia. Located on the Catawba River near the interchange of I-85 and I-485, the park features rock climbing walls, mountain biking trails and flat water canoeing and kayaking in addition to the rapids.

Whatever your passion, and whatever your budget, as a sports fan you'll be satisfied in Charlotte.
